Seychelles
Blue Economy
Strategy
2015
Our seas...

Feeds us  Transports us  Mesmerizes us
Fisheries industry is Seychelles’ largest source of exports earnings

Courses at Maritime Training Academy for seafarers
US boosts Seychelles piracy fight

A Spanish fishing boat was attacked off the Seychelles this month
Seychelles is walking the talk

The ‘Unlock the Sea’ programme launched by Le Meriden Fisherman’s Cove hotel. (Marine Conservation Society Seychelles) Photo License: CC-BY

Photo credit Seychelles News Agency (2018)
What can threaten our blue economy?
What concrete policy measures have been introduced?
The four strategic priority areas

(i) Creating sustainable wealth

(ii) Sharing prosperity

(iii) Securing healthy and productive oceans

(iv) Strengthening the enabling environment

Connie Anthony was promoted Lieutenant in March and she is the only female officer on board Seychelles Coast Guards vessel PS Etolie. (Louis Toussaint)

Photo license

(Seychelles News Agency) - Seychelles has joined an internationally recognised association for women in the maritime sector, WOMESA, after the launching of the local affiliate group.

WOMESA-Seychelles will operate under the aegis of the Women in the Maritime Sector in East and Southern Africa (WOMESA).
The Seychelles industrial tuna fishery

Best performing and long-standing employees at Indian Ocean Tuna Ltd (2017)

Food catering business on the Fishing port
Seychelles joins international campaign “TAKE 3 FOR THE SEA”
Reinforcing our support for IORA